

VEREDUS TALKS

Welcome to the August edition of our regular market update, insight pieces and thought leadership.

In this edition:

Is this the right time for senior stakeholders to address the 'digital' issues?

Neal Mankey, Associate Director, contemplates this question.

Digitising Britain's Railways

Steve Bell, Business Development Director for our Assessment and Development team has some interesting views on returning furloughed workers.

Bouncing Back – furloughed workers

Peter Keegan, Associate Director, examines the shortage in experience and skill in the Rail sector and considers what options the industry may have.

Andy Fisher, Private Sector Lead, discusses the pending deadline for the end of the Emergency Measures Agreements and what the future of Rail might look like.

Emergency Measures Agreement – where do we go from here?

Plus here are links to some of the things going on across our wider business worth checking out: Over the last few months we've seen the quick adoption of technologies as organisations embrace new ways of working previously considered not possible. As we look to the future, how many of these changes are here to stay as we begin to recover, re-imagine and rebuild? Hear from Chantal Free, Executive Officer for People Solutions.

Investments in cloud infrastructure are projected to expand by 10.4% in 2020 despite the economic fall-out from the coronavirus pandemic. Why is cloud computing so important in planning for the future?
